

CLAIM ONE: (AMENDED)

An improved [band aid] bandage member having an upper surface and a lower surface, such [band aid] bandage having means to aid in the application and retention of medication on [an] a specific area of a person's skin comprising:

(a) a [band aid] bandage member having an upper [surface] face and a lower [surface] face, and said bandage member having an opening extending from [the] said upper [surface] face to and through the lower [surface] face;

(b) adhesive means coated [in] [the] on part of on said lower [surface] face of [the] said [band aid] bandage member in order to adhere [the] said bandage member to the skin of the individual;

c. protruding means having an upper surface portion and a lower surface portion affixed to said lower face of said bandage member, said protruding means extending away from said lower face, with said lower surface portion on said protruding means adapted to embrace in a flush manner against a portion of the person's skin, said protruding means affixed to said lower face of said bandage member adjacent said opening in said bandage member.

CLAIM TWO: (AMENDED)

An improved bandage member having an upper surface and a lower surface, such bandage having means to aid in the application and retention of medication on an area of the skin of an individual comprising:

(a) a bandage member having an upper surface and a lower surface, said bandage member having an opening extending from said upper surface to and through the said lower surface, said opening being adapted to receive medication through said opening for the given area of the skin of the individual;

(b) adhesive means coated on said lower surface of said bandage member;

(c) protruding means having an upper surface portion and a lower surface portion affixed to said lower face of said bandage member, said protruding means extending away from said lower face, with said lower surface on said protruding means adapted to embrace against in a flush manner against a portion of the person's skin, said protruding means formed as a perimeter member with an open inner portion, said open inner portion of said perimeter member being placed around said opening on said lower surface of said bandage member.

CLAIM THREE: (AMENDED)

An improved bandage member, such bandage member having means to aid in the application and retention of medication on an area of the skin of an individual comprising:

(a) a bandage member having an upper surface and a lower surface, with said bandage member having a spatial channel extending from said upper surface to and through said lower surface, said channel having an upper opening and a lower opening adapted to receive medication for the given area of the skin;

(b) adhesive means deployed on the lower surface of said bandage member;

(c) outwardly extending protective perimeter means for retention of said medication to an area of the skin beneath said lower opening disposed around said lower opening on said lower surface of said bandage member.

CLAIM FOUR: (AMENDED)

A member having means to aid in the application and retention of medication on a specific area of the skin of an individual, comprising:

(a) a bandage member having a first surface and a second surface said bandage member having a medication receiving opening extending from said first [second] surface into said bandage member to said second surface;

(b) [adhering means on said bandage member to adhere said [bandage] flexible member to the skin of the individual];

(c) downwardly depending on retention means on said second surface of said bandage member, said retention means extending away from said second surface some distance and surrounding said opening in perimeter fashion on said lower surface.

CLAIM 5: (NEW)

A bandage member to be adhered to skin of an individual, comprising:

- (a) a bandage member having an upper face and a lower face and wherein said bandage member has a first end and a second end, and further wherein said bandage member has a first lateral side and a second lateral side and wherein said bandage member has an opening with an upper opening and a lower face opening, on said lower face extending completely through said bandage from upper face to said lower face;
- (b) a retractable flap member affixed over the upper opening of said opening in said bandage;
- (c) circumferential extension means affixed to the lower face of said bandage member said circumferential means extending away from said lower face and having a lower surface portion to rest against the person's skin, with said circumferential means surrounding the lower opening portion of said opening in said bandage member.

CLAIM SIX: NEW

An improved bandage member, such bandage member having means to aid in the application and retention of medication on a localized area of the skin of an individual comprising:

(a) a flexible member having an upper surface portion and a lower surface portion with said flexible member having an open spatial channel extending completely from said upper surface portion to and through said lower surface portion, said channel having an upper surface and a lower surface opening;

(b) perimeter means disposed around said lower surface opening on said lower surface portion of said flexible member, said perimeter means extending away from said lower surface portion and surrounding said lower surface opening.